

WASHOUGAL INDUSTRIAL GIANT—The Washougal Woolen Mills is that city's biggest industry, by a great margin. For many years a steady contributor to the economy of Clark County's eastern most town, the mills turn out vast quantities of woolen material which is used for various purposes. Raw wool, a great deal of it coming from this state, is turned into finished cloth at the Washougal factory, the only mill of its type in Washington. (Vanity Fair-Columbian photo.)
